We finally have a good crop of tomatoes after nothing for the past several years. I went a little overboard in costs, but as each year comes and goes, the cost diminishes. We are having a bumper crop of Better Boy and Big Boy tomatoes. We planted one Eggplant, and it is just loaded with fruit. Out Red Bell pepper is loaded, the Green Bell is doing good, but our Yellow Bell pepper is slow; however, I would say that container gardening is the way to go, especially when you have limited space and not so good soil, as we do. Great Book.1 of 1 people found the following review helpful. Great! I did the big pot with obelisk inserted ...By RhondaGreat! I did the big pot with obelisk inserted inside for cherry tomatoes this summer and it was beautiful. So I made a second one for green peppers. Both yielded lots of veggies from only one plant of each (I used the fertilizer she suggested...I got it here on) I bought the obelisks at Agway for half price. I will redo them again next year because it went so well...and because hubby did the watering!2 of 2 people found the following review helpful. nice referenceBy Patricia L. SaletoreI saw the author on a PBS program and was attracted to her expertise on container gardening. It is very picture heavy, but also has text explaining the best varieties she found for this kind of gardening. I plan to refer to it for some time.

Pamela Crawford, container garden guru and the queen of easy gardening, has done it again in this groundbreaking book. She shows you how to grow vegetables in containers with such easy techniques that even the worst gardener can have bumper crops of tomatoes! And, for the first time in any book, she shows how to make your vegetables look great, worthy of the nicest patio! Pamela grew 1768 plants in the course of writing this book and shows her mistakes (bloopers) along with her successes so that you won't make the same mistakes with your vegetables. With these simple-to-follow instructions, you won't believe how easy and beautiful your containerized vegetable garden can be! The book is extremely easy to read, with over 500 gorgeous pictures.

About the AuthorPamela Crawford, author of nine gardening books, is considered one of the most accomplished container garden experts in the country. In addition to designing gardens for over 1500 residences, her work has been featured on the cover of Better Homes and Gardens publications as well as in Southern Living, HGTV Magazine, Fine Gardening, Country Gardens, Country Almanac, Small Gardens, and in over fifty newspapers. As an expert in her field, she has appeared on the Fine Living Network, Fox News affiliates and numerous local tv shows. Pamela has an undergraduate degree from Vanderbilt University and a masters degree in landscape architecture from Florida International University, where she received the prestigious Torch Award as an outstanding alumnus from the school of architecture. Pamela has been heavily involved in trial gardens, both on a university and private level. Her goal is to find plants that give the highest performance for the least amount of care. This is her fourth book on container gardening.
