However, I am not much of a "flower" person.

Cross stitching is a popular and fun way to create beautiful needlework projects; however, those with poor eyesight may have a difficult time working with such small detail. Author and expert cross stitcher B.J. McDonald took that into consideration when she created her "tired eyes" projects, which she has compiled in Easy See, Easy Stitch Cross Stitch. McDonald's team of designers created over 30 delightful projects, which are easy to see and work with yet remain elaborate and appealing. Taking care not to create patterns that might appear simplistic, the designers created projects for afghans, table runners, pillows, towels, wearables and more. All projects use Aida cloth, with 10 stitches to the inch or less, and all charts and text are in large print for easy reading. Crafters with "tired eyes" will enjoy creating these lovely cross-stitch crafts themed around gift-giving, special events, holidays and home decor.
