I received a copy of this particular issue as a gift from my brother (how often does your brother ever give you anything!), and had picked out one of the designs to stitch, but somehow lost the chart. Now I have one again and will look forward to one day getting back to working on it again. I liked the charts because they are done in color (something you don't find very often), which I think tends to make it easier to use them. They also included helpful hints in the back so if you had a question about how to do something (such as quarter stitches or simply centering the design correctly), you could find it there. Not very many cross stitch magazines bother to do this. They will tell you to center the design before you start to stitch, for example, but won't bother to show you how, and if you are unfamiliar with counted cross stitch, you might not know how to do this.
